All Soul's Day Mass at the U.S. – Mexico Border where the fence divides the altar

Migrants and refugees are not pawns on the chessboard of humanity. They are children, women and men who leave or who are forced to leave their homes for various reasons, who share a legitimate desire for knowing and having, but above all for being more.<sup>1</sup>

Migration

Columban Missionaries are called to heal, reconcile, build bridges and create mutual understanding through dialogue which is expressed through our solidarity with marginalized people and the exploited Earth<sup>2</sup>. Since 2000 the Missionary Society of St. Columban committed itself in a special way to “continue accompanying and defending the rights of migrants,” and to address the underlying causes of the migration of peoples.

Columban Missionaries serve economically poor and marginalized communities globally, often in countries plagued by poverty, injustice, climate disasters, armed conflict, and religious, inter-ethnic or political persecution. These conditions drive people to migrate away from their homes in search of economic and human security. We believe that we are called to both serve the needs of migrants everywhere, and to address the root causes of migration so that people and their families have the choice to remain at home.

As Columban Missionaries have migrated throughout the world to meet the needs of God’s most vulnerable people, we have witnessed the suffering of migrants. Wishing to welcome, serve, and take a stand alongside them, we have outlined the following concerns that need to be addressed in order to ensure the preservation of human dignity.

Prayer: Praying for and with Migrants

Good and gracious God,

We thank you for the gift of families.

We are grateful for all of the joy and love that they bring into our lives, and we ask that you provide special protection for all families, particularly those who face hardships as they move in search of a better life.

Show mercy to those who travel in danger, and lead them to a place of safety and peace. Comfort those who are alone and afraid because their families have been torn apart by violence and injustice.

As we reflect upon the difficult journey that the Holy Family faced as refugees in Egypt, help us to remember the suffering of all migrant families. Through the intercession of Mary our Mother, and St.

JUSTICE, PEACE, AND INTEGRITY OF CREATION

Joseph the Worker, her spouse, we pray that all migrants may be reunited with their loved ones and find the meaningful work they seek.

Open our hearts so that we may provide hospitality for all who come in search of refuge. Give us the courage to welcome every stranger as Christ in our midst.

We ask this in the name of Jesus Christ, your son, Amen.

LOVING FATHER,

Remembering that the Holy Family fled violence and lived for a time as refugees, we ask that you protect all refugee families fleeing persecution, and provide them a place of safety and comfort.

For children who are making perilous journeys, often alone and without the protection of loved ones, we ask that you reunite them with their families and protect them from violence on the journey.

For all migrants, that they not feel compelled to migrate but have opportunities in their homeland where they can thrive and live fully human lives.

Open our hearts so that we may provide hospitality for those who come in search of refuge.

Through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son, who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, forever and ever. Amen.<sup>3</sup>

PADRE AMOROSO,

Al recordar que la Sagrada Familia huyó de la violencia y que vivió durante un tiempo en el exilio, te pedimos que protejas a todas las familias que huyendo de la persecución buscan refugio, y les proporciones un lugar seguro y acogedor.

Por los niños que viajan en medio de tantos peligros, a menudo solos y sin la protección de sus seres queridos, te pedimos que los reúnas con sus familias y los protejas de la violencia en el camino.

Por todos los emigrantes, para que no se sientan obligados a emigrar, sino que encuentren oportunidades en su tierra natal donde puedan prosperar y vivir una vida plenamente humana.

Abre nuestro corazón para que podamos ofrecer hospitalidad a aquellos que vienen en busca de refugio.

Por nuestro Señor Jesucristo, tu Hijo, que vive y reina contigo en la unidad del Espíritu Santo y es Dios por los siglos de los siglos. Amén.<sup>4</sup>

Study: Migration

Root Causes

The number of migrants has increased from 175 million to an estimated 232 million people today,<sup>5</sup> in part due to population growth, but more often due to poverty, injustice, climate change, and armed conflict that continue to displace millions of people across the globe. In the past three decades, the number of international migrants, has more than doubled to nearly 200 million worldwide.<sup>6</sup> These include economic migrants compelled to move to feed their families, refugees and internally displaced persons fleeing persecution and natural disasters, including those related to climate change and victims of human trafficking. Increasingly, women and children make up the majority of migrants. We recognize the right to migrate in order to seek a higher quality of life, but often global economic policies result in grave inequalities and oppressive working conditions causing people to leave home.

Poverty and Economic Push Factors

The vast majority of migrants are economic migrants who have few options to remain in their countries of origin. Of the 200 million migrants worldwide, 30 to 40 million are undocumented. Ten years ago, 550 million people with jobs were living on less than $1 a day, while almost half of the world's 2.8 billion workers earn less than $2 a day.<sup>7</sup> Today, these numbers are even greater, often due to trade and investment agreements that favor corporate profit over sustainable and equitable development. Food insecurity, unemployment, low wages, and lack of dignified employment combined with the promise of employment opportunities in receiving nations are powerful incentives to migrate.

Climate Migrants

Increasingly, people are fleeing natural disasters, often made more frequent and more intense by human-caused climate change. Five years ago, an estimated 25 to 50 million people had been displaced by environmental factors<sup>8</sup>, and that number could rise to 150 million by 2050.<sup>9</sup> Global warming and climate change create environmental conditions that strain local economies and create deadly conflicts for scarce resources. Hurricanes and typhoons, desertification and droughts, rising sea levels and the disappearance of tropical forests and coral reefs threaten the web of life and create "climate refugees."

War and Conflict

Every day, millions of refugees are fleeing their homes and crossing borders to escape wars and deadly conflicts in their home countries.<sup>10</sup> Every year, religious and political persecution drives millions more to migrate in order to protect themselves and their families. Especially when violence is attributed to a poor or corrupt regional police force and justice systems, those affected relocate due to lack of protection. Increasingly, wars and conflicts are being fought over natural resources, including oil, precious metals, food and water, leading one UN official to say: “The wars of the twenty-first century will be fought over water.”<sup>11</sup> Inter-religious and inter-ethnic conflicts are particularly deadly, leaving a toll of death and destruction in their wake.

Action: Columban Response

Welcoming the Stranger

Migration is one of the major social phenomena of our time, a “sign of our times,” and the Gospel invites us to welcome the migrant as we would welcome Christ (Matthew 25:35). In more than a dozen countries around the world, from Taiwan and the Philippines in Asia, to Peru and Mexico in the Americas, to Ireland and the United States where we find our roots, “Columbans have listened and responded to the cry of migrants, refugees and asylum seekers. We have been energized and blessed by our work in this area” (Strong and Courageous, 2006). We are committed to “continue accompanying and defending the rights of migrants” (Called to Communion, 2012).

Addressing Root Causes

Forced migration has many causes, including poverty, food insecurity, climate disasters, violent conflict, and religious and political persecution. Too often our foreign policies preserve these underlying causes, rather than seek to change them. Governments should promote sustainable development goals, debt and trade policies, and reforms of international financial institutions that address the root causes of migration and enable people to remain in their local communities. Above all, practices that destroy indigenous communities and ravage the earth, such as corporate mining and agribusiness, must be ended, and a more equitable and sustainable model of development promoted.

<sup>10</sup> The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) estimates there were 10.8 million refugees and 28.8 million internally displaced persons (IDPs) in the world in 2012.

Protecting Human Dignity and Human Rights

Governments must create humane temporary worker programs that include the same benefits that non-temporary workers receive, including a living wage, and safe and dignified working conditions. Programs must include regulated visa / work permits to allow employees to move between employers, prohibition of debt bondage and inflated broker fees, and protection of workers' rights in conjunction with severe employer repercussions for noncompliance. Regular monitoring and enforcement are key.

Family Reunification and Protection of Children

We echo the words of Pope Benedict XVI's call for migration policies aimed at "safeguarding the needs and rights of individual migrants and their families, and at the same time, those of the host countries." Lack of legal documentation forces immigrants to live in a culture of fear, insecurity, and vulnerability. Migration policies need to be just and compassionate, granting protection and support to migrants, especially unaccompanied minors so that their families may be reunited. The criminalization of migration, the militarization of borders, and deportation practices that tear families apart.

Climate Migrants

We call for a reduction of carbon emissions, mindful of the ways in which our energy use contributes to global warming and endangers the environment. We ask the United States and other nations to adhere to the suggestions of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), which indicated that the global community must reduce emissions by between 25 and 40 percent by 2020, and by a minimum of 80 percent by 2050, below a 1990 baseline, in order to remain sustainable.

Interreligious Dialogue

Whether as refugees, migrants, or asylum seekers, the movement of peoples is a reality for communities of all faith traditions. The host countries and communities can often be environments where religious tolerance is not practiced. In contrast, we seek to create space where people, especially migrants, can freely practice their faith and dialogue with people of other faiths as a witness to our belief in the universality of God's love.
